

I am writing to request that the FCC do nothing to change NJ's "Do Not Call" law. The protection this law afford NJ citizens is needed, appreciated and very well-deserved. On a personal level, getting the constant telemarketers out of our already limited time has been a blessing. I'm sure many NJ families would agree with me. New Jersey small businesses can also benefit from the protection currently afforded by NJ's consumer protection laws. Just the other day, my husband was complaining that he actually needed to hire another secretary just to handle the constant phone calls his funeral home receives from telemarketers. Obviously, the phone at a funeral home must always be answered and in a professional and personal manner. It has gotten to the point, however, where nearly one half of the incoming calls are telemarketers!!! I have just registered his business phone with NJ Do Not call in an effort to stop this waste of money and manpower. Certainly, it cannot be good for NJ if the state's small businesses are being financially burdened and slowed down by telemarketers calls. Please do not weaken this law!
